Skied over to Schlasmans yesterday. Early morning sun exposure on southerlies plus Saturdays wind led to a crust and or sastruggi setting up by mid afternoon. Northerlies were spared from the wind and still holding cold snow. A decent sized loose/ wet D1.5 came down between laps (probably 1300) in what i believe is called gangstas. South facing, steep, thin and rocky. Not a place youd expect people to be skiing since there is poor coverage but a good reminder to watch out for overhead hazard since it ran out into Schlashmans gully.

Flat light yielded a mediocre picture at best
